Mayor Nicole Read

Municipal election

Silver Valley mom joins mayor's race

Nicole Read announced she's running for the top Maple Ridge seat after taking a month to decide.

Maple Ridge has elected three woman mayors in its 140 year history and Nicole Read aims to be number four.

The Silver Valley resident formally announced her candidacy for the City's top job on Wednesday. Last month, Read announced her interest in running in the upcoming municipal election, but was undecided on either the mayorship or for council.

 Mayor Nicole Read, who has worked in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside, said Maple Ridge took on its own outreach, shelter and housing effort because the province's $1 million-a-year Salvation Army operation isn't working.
 Coleman is not amused. He said he's had no complaints about Abbotsford's Salvation Army shelter, and Read is the only one gripping. And no mayor is going to tell him how to spend provincial dollars. Maple Ridge now has two shelters with accompanying street drugs, prostitution and crime.
 I asked Coleman about the 10-year-study led by Simon Fraser University researcher Julian Savory and the strewn, vandalism, trash rummaging etc etc.and it has damaged my wife and I beyond words... in every way you could imagine.

Seeing how everyone is kinda hot...

We'll offer all the normal taxpaying, concerned and fed up citizens of maple ridge a buy one get 1 free ice cream all weekend. Password is either "no shelter" "no junky safe house" or "Mayor NR must go".....or best of all..."get em all outta here!"

Maple Ridge residents: I have set up an Indiegogo, crowd-sourced project (I know this breaks rule #3 of this group so feel free to remove this post and/or kick me out of this group) but I think this is relevant to the cause; it is for the purchase of a house to be used as a low-barrier shelter. The address is of course the house for sale right next door to Mayor Nichole Read.
